

PREFACE

The articles presented in the fifth volume of “Copernican Letters”, covers the area of chemistry, physics and life sciences. All of them are written by the young scientists as well as experienced scientists, which have the opportunity to present the results of their research. We are continuing our efforts to give the new platform for the graduate students publications in peer reviewed articles collected in annual periodic. The name is after the greatest Polish astronomer Nicolaus Copernicus (1473-1543). The purpose of this publication is to present results from various area of science, giving the opportunity for young reader to compare the different ways of solving scientific problem.

We hope the content of the volume VI will be useful for Ph.D students, scientists and other readers in different area of science.

The editing team wish to acknowledge the reviewers, who provide the reviews of the manuscript.
