

EDITORIAL

I wish to welcome Readers to no. 24 of the “Comparative Law Review”. The present issue embraces two studies, nine articles and shorter notes, as well as a case-law note, from several areas, including private and public law. We have successfully maintained the trend towards the internationalization of the contents, while ensuring that submissions concerning comparative approaches to domestic law issues are also duly represented. Let me recall that the Editors of “CLR” welcome contributions on all fields of law, legal theory, as well as the history of law. We also continuously encourage authors to offer studies or shorter articles on international and European law.

In 2018 we were saddened by the news of the passing of one of the Members of our Academic Board – Professor Christophe Swinarski. A tribute to His memory and an in memoriam note open this issue of the “CLR”.

I wish to express my warmest words of thanks to members of the Academic Board and Editorial Board. My special appreciation goes to our Editorial Assistants, Ms. Daria Gęsicka, Ms. Julia Kapelańska Pręgoska, and Ms. Katarzyna Widlas, for their tireless efforts in running the journal. Traditionally, let me thank Mr. Christopher Wright for ensuring that the submissions we receive and submit for reviews reflect adequate standards of good-quality academic English.
