

To the Reader

Since the “Comparative Law Review” academic journal was reactivated in 2013 by Nicolaus Copernicus University in Toruń, we have released seven issues of this magazine. It has featured numerous research papers, glosses, reviews, and other comparative law publications from many legal fields. Foreign law papers have also been published, which could be valuable material for even broader comparative law research. It is the Readers, however, who will conclusively decide whether and to what extent the publications featured in CLR have proved to be useful in theoretical and practical comparative law research.

Already in 2015, the efforts of the authors of papers published in our magazine, of its Editorial Board, and of the Academic Council resulted in its being awarded our first 5 points in the academic journal ranking of the Ministry of Science and Higher Education. The journal has been indexed in the following databases: Index Copernicus Journals Master List, ERIH plus and CEEOL, and its full-text was also made available on-line on the Academic Journals Platform of Nicolaus Copernicus University in Toruń: <http://apcz.pl/czasopisma//index.php/CLR>.

Future issues of the “Comparative Law Review” will be published annually, edited by Dr. Hab. Michał Balcerzak, Nicolaus Copernicus University professor, and with a new Editorial Board. On behalf of the current Editorial Board, I wish the new Editor-in-Chief and the Editorial Board every success in running the magazine.

In conclusion, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the members of the previous Editorial Board and to the Academic Council for their invaluable assistance and support in this responsible editorial work. I also express my thanks to Mr. Christopher Wright for his help in shaping the papers’ final linguistic form.

Editor-in-Chief
